

MOISSANT RECEIVES A NEW PROPELLER

American Expects to Complete Remarkable Flight to London Today.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—John B. Moissant, the American who has astounded the world by his Paris-London aeroplane flight, today received the propeller lent to him by J. Armstrong Drexel, and immediately set to work to prepare for the conclusion of his journey.

"I will start for London, finishing the trip within a short time—this afternoon at the latest, if the present conditions hold," he said.

The propeller to replace the one smashed when the plane fell was sent from Blackpool to London by Drexel, and brought to Rainham by motor car. Moissant sent a warm message of thanks to Drexel, who uses a Bleriot monoplane similar to that of Moissant, and to Graham, White, the Englishman who proffered another propeller.

The aviator and his mechanic, Albert Fleux, who made the trip from France with him, spent much of the night overhauling the machine. It was found that the damage done yesterday when a stay snapped and the engine was fouled, was not as serious as at first supposed, but great difficulty was experienced in dislodging the machine from its peculiar position.

NEWCASTLE, Ky., Aug. 19.—Ezra Wilhoit and Mrs. Helen Harp were arrested this morning on charges of murder as the result of the finding of the body of William Wilhoit in the Kentucky river last night. The men were brothers.

The police said that both were admirers of Mrs. Harp and had quarreled over her.

The woman is said to have preferred Ezra.

MOISSANT'S LIFE STORY READS LIKE MELODRAMA

American Hero of Paris-London Flight Known in Central America As Soldier of Fortune—Once Imprisoned By Salvador Government.

If one were to take all Richard Harding Davis' heroes of South American revolutions, and roll them into one, he might gain some idea of the character and career of John B. Moissant, the daring young American who has just started the world by his sensational flight from Paris to London.

Soldier of fortune, farmer, business man, filibuster, revolutionist, dictator, fugitive from justice, and aviator, John B. Moissant holds the trophy for daring on land, or sea, or in the air.

Born of French Canadian parents and brought up in the country just outside of Chicago, young Moissant became, while quite young, a victim of "wanderlust."

He persuaded his three brothers that fame and fortune awaited them in Central America and forthwith the trio left for Salvador. His three brothers—Alfred, Edward, and George—and himself, soon made themselves obnoxious to the government in Salvador.

The government of Salvador insisted that the Americans pay taxes and the brothers refused, believing them exorbitant. An attempt was made to arrest all three, but John was the only one caught and locked up.

His three brothers were forced to hide, trying to think out a scheme to release their brother. Finally they decided that force, aided by a little bluff, was needed. Forthwith, they succeeded in stealing a Gatling gun from one of the reservations near by and mounted it in front of the prison where John was in captivity.

A threat to blow the place to pieces with the gun was enough to cause the jailer to open the doors, and the four brothers escaped over the border into Nicaragua, leaving their artillery behind. When the authorities of the jail found it the next morning they discovered that it lacked ammunition—the trio having been unable to find cartridges to fit it.

Once in Nicaragua the quartet settled down to a peaceful life—for a time. But hatred for the Salvador government was too strong. John engineered more than one expedition across the border into Salvador. On one of these trips he was within a few miles of the capital before his force of a few score men was discovered and defeated by the government troops. On another occasion he actually entered the city, only to be finally repulsed.

One of the singular circumstances of these brushes with the Salvadoran government was the fact that, throughout the son of the President of Salvador remained a firm friend of Moissant's, and they frequently met between campaigns.

Following leading revolutions in Central America like sitting over a volcano, John Moissant decided to take up aviation. In the meantime, however, he and his brothers entered claims against the Salvador government for damages both to themselves and their property during the troubles in that country and they have engaged a law firm in this city to try and enlist the services of the United States Government in this matter.

A Washington friend of Moissant said today when informed that Moissant had fallen 400 feet and was not hurt.

"Why, they couldn't kill him if he fell 4,000 feet. He is one of those men who brave every danger and always come off without a scratch. He will probably be killed by choking to death on a fish bone or by sneezing and breaking a blood vessel. I would not be surprised to hear of him next as sailing over the border of Salvador, dropping bombs on the head of the government generals."

CROPS OF THE WEST MOST PROSPEROUS

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—According to the statements of James J. Hill, who has just returned from a trip through the Northwest, the crops for this and next season will probably exceed all records. Mr. Hill claims the harvest of this year alone will amount to $9,000,000,000, and that that of next season will probably exceed that.

BIPLANE SMASHED AT ASBURY PARK

Johnstone to Try for Height Record Today in New Machine.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 19.—As a result of a collision between his aeroplane and a fence, near which a large number of automobiles were parked, Ralph Johnstone's Wright biplane is so badly damaged that it is probable that he will not be able to use it any more during the present aviation meet.

The accident occurred yesterday afternoon just after Johnstone had made a short flight and was attempting to land. He misjudged his distance and came down too near the inclosure, the momentum of his machine carrying it into the fence before he could check it. The biplane was badly smashed, but Johnstone escaped injury. He declares that he will repeat his trial for the height record today, if he can procure a suitable machine.

Another thrill was provided for the crowd yesterday when it was announced that Walter Brookins, who fell from his machine last week and only escaped death by a small margin, would again try for the height record. He made a short flight yesterday, and announced that he was going up again this week in a long flight. His face is still swathed in bandages, but otherwise he seems none the worse for the accident of last week.

Archie Hoxsey, another Wright pupil, also made an attempt for the height record, but, after going up about half a mile, he abandoned his trial in order to hover over a balloon in distress. The balloon finally came safely to earth about three miles from the aviation field, and Hoxsey, after seeing that it was safe, returned to the field.

FLIGHT OF STUDENT STOPPED BY A WIRE

Propeller Breaks But Descent Is Easy—Water Feat Planned.

HEMPSTEAD, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Philip W. Wilcox, the Columbia student who built a biplane at Columbia some months ago and flew for the first time a few days ago, made a flight here this morning in the rain. He had his machine under perfect control until a wire broke his propeller, when he made a successful landing.

He will try to cross Long Island sound this afternoon for the cup offered as a trophy.

As a precaution he will have an inflated inner automobile tube about his waist to buoy him up if he falls into the sound. He is an expert swimmer.
